

Greg Hill

Greg Hill is the defining figure of ski mountaineering and backcountry skiing in Canada, an athlete whose accomplishments redefined the outer limits of human endurance in snow sports and whose influence shaped an entire generation of practitioners. His 2010 two-million-vertical-foot year remains one of the most audacious achievements in skiing history, earned through years of physiological preparation, rigorous safety discipline, and genuine team commitment. His 24-hour world vertical record (50,500+ ft), the Northern Monashee Traverse, Spearhead speed records, and first descents across four continents place him among the sport's all-time greats. Beyond his personal feats, Hill transformed how Canadians engage with backcountry skiing — through his pioneering blog, million-view avalanche safety content, international speaking career, and mentorship of athletes including Christina Lustenberger and Cody Townsend. He was a key collaborator in founding Protect Our Winters Canada and has been a visible, credible leader in sustainable adventure long before it was fashionable. Seven witnesses including two current Canadian Ski Hall of Fame members offer unequivocal endorsements. Greg Hill is not merely deserving of induction; he embodies what the Canadian Ski Hall of Fame exists to honour.
